General Program Types

Rehabilitative, medical, and other services available to offenders at the facility are generally described as academic, counseling (which includes substance abuse), recreation, religious activities and vocational/on-the-job training (OJT).

Academic: General Education which includes literacy and math instruction: The Special Education program is for those with learning handicaps. Literacy/Remedial Reading (LRR) is for those functioning below the fifth-grade reading level. Adult Basic Education (ABE) is for offenders functioning between the fifth-grade level and eighth-grade level. General Education Development (GED) is for those at or above the eighth-grade level without a high school diploma; completion of GED earns the student a high school equivalency diploma.

Counseling: This is a very broad category of treatment. It may include sex-offender, positive mental attitude (PMA), or pre-release counseling to ease the return to free society. Additionally, it may include anger management and many others, along with substance abuse. It offers programs for those with alcohol/drug programs and may include Alcoholics and Narcotics Anonymous (AA/NA) and other treatment modes. It also includes individual, group counseling modes and Specialized Intervention Units (SID) where the participants live together in treatment communities and assist each other to overcome their problems.

Religious Activities: Offenders are assured religious freedom under the U.S. Constitution. Georgia Department of Corrections Chaplaincy Services will arrange to meet the need for any recognized faith, including services by and individual contact with ministers of that faith. Full-time and part-time chaplains also offer non-sectarian humanitarian assistance to any troubled offender. Religious instruction on the Bible, the Koran and other spiritual guides is available.

Vocational/OJT: This section provides information on training for a particular job skill - classroom, shop and/or on-the-job training (OJT) requirements. Completion leads to the same certification or diploma offered by a free society training program.
